This bibliography contains a survey of the research conducted in the years 1959-1961 on Citizenship, Immigration and Ethnic Groups in Canada. It is meant to supplement the 1960 publication which covered the years 1920-1958. The initial date for the material included in the present publication was generally taken as January 1959; the terminal date as 31 December 1961. However, it also includes important relevant works completed in 1958 which were not made known in time for the last issue.

As in the past, questionnaires were distributed to members of universities, government agencies, and voluntary organizations in conjunction with the distribution of the previous compilation. While the response rate was gratifying, many of them reported no research. However, some centres where research was being conducted did not return the questionnaires. Consequently further intensive bibliographical research was required. As a result, the majority of the references appearing herein have been obtained from professional periodicals and from the National Library. We would therefore ask recipients of this bibliography two favors: first, to complete and return a questionnaire with respect to their own work or work within their jurisdiction, even if it is a nil return, and second, to report relevant research in other centres of which they have knowledge.

The format of this year's bibliography parallels the one set up for last year's consolidated issue. Materials are first divided between general works and works concentrating on specific ethnic groups. The ethnic group studies are ordered first by native groups, then by other non-European groups, and then the large group of European origin is broken down into specific European ethnic groups arranged in accordance with their population size in Canada. This latter arrangement permits a direct indication of the relationship between the size of the group and the number of studies on it. Some large groups have few studies, some small groups have numerous studies. The approach may help to indicate areas where more research may be fruitful. Only European ethnic groups showing a population of over 90,000 in 1951 are listed separately in the general order. The remainder appear with appropriate headings in the Other European section. Segments of a major ethnic group which have formed specific ethnic settlements and which, judging by the amount of research interest shown in them, are of major significance in the understanding of ethnic relations are listed as subsections under the main ethnic section, e.g. Russian, Doukhobor.

The materials in the specific ethnic sections are further classified by principal subject matter in accordance with the same coding system as presented in the Table of Contents for the General Section. Studies pertaining to particular ethnic groups are thus arranged by the same order of subject matter as is the general section. Thereby, persons interested in a particular subject area can readily find related general works and also related specific ethnic studies in the various sections.

An author index is given in Appendix A. A key to abbreviations used is given in Appendix B.

The text is set up to serve as a bilingual document. The sections of the text which would be read by readers of either language (i.e. the preface, table of contents, section headings, and questionnaire) are provided in both languages. Where necessary, the French version follows the English text, and is given the same page numbers with a suffix (F). In the main body, individual references which were originally published in English are given an English description. Those references which were published in French are described in French. It was felt that those users who would be referring to such articles in the original language would obviously be conversant with that language. Bilingual sources are designated with a single asterisk (*). References which have separate English and French editions are marked with a double asterisk ().

We wish to express our thanks to those who collaborated in this work by providing us with information. It is our hope that this bibliography will prove useful to persons interested in research on Citizenship, Immigration and Ethnic Groups in Canada. In return, we would trust that recipients of this service will co-operate by listing recent works or projects known to them on the form or in the format provided at the end in Appendix C, so that the 1962-1963 survey can appear early in 1963.

Questionnaire returns should be mailed to the Economic and Social Research Division, Department of Citizenship and Immigration, Ottawa.

Director of Research.

La présente bibliographie contient un relevé des recherches sur la citoyenneté, l'immigration et les groupes ethniques du Canada, effectuée au cours des années de 1959 à 1961. Elle a pour but de compléter la publication de 1960 qui embrassait les années de 1920 à 1958. La documentation incluse dans la présente publication vise la période qui s'étend du mois de janvier 1959 au 31 décembre 1961. Cependant, on y trouve aussi des travaux importants terminés en 1958 et non mentionnés dans le dernier numéro.

Comme par le passé, nous avons distribué des questionnaires au personnel d'universités, d'organismes gouvernementaux et d'associations bénévoles, en même temps que la compilation précédente. Bien que le nombre des réponses reçues ait été satisfaisant, beaucoup de personnes n'ont signalé aucune recherche. Par contre, certains centres où des recherches ont été effectuées n'ont pas retourné le questionnaire. En conséquence, il a été nécessaire de faire beaucoup d'autres recherches bibliographiques. C'est ce qui explique que la majorité des références données ici ont été tirées de publications périodiques spécialisées et de la Bibliothèque nationale. Nous nous permettons donc de demander deux faveurs aux personnes qui reçoivent la présente bibliographie: premièrement, nous les prions de bien vouloir remplir le questionnaire à l'égard de leurs propres travaux et de ceux qui relèvent de leur autorité, et qu'elles le retournent non rempli si aucun travail n'a été effectué et, deuxièmement, de nous mettre au courant des recherches intéressantes qui se poursuivent dans d'autres centres, et dont elles ont connaissance.

On a utilisé pour la bibliographie de cette année le même format que pour le recueil distribué l'an dernier. La documentation est d'abord séparée en deux catégories, dont une comprend les travaux généraux et l'autre ceux qui étudient particulièrement les groupes ethniques. Les études portant sur les groupes ethniques sont d'abord énumérées par groupes dont les membres sont nés au pays, puis par d'autres groupes non européens et enfin le grand groupe d'origine européenne est divisé en groupes ethniques européens énumérés selon l'importance numérique de leur population au Canada. Ce dernier arrangement permet de voir immédiatement le rapport qui existe entre l'importance numérique du groupe et le nombre d'études effectuées à son égard. Certains groupements nombreux ont fait l'objet de peu d'études, tandis que de petits groupes ont donné lieu à de nombreuses études. Cette présentation peut aider à découvrir les régions où d'autres recherches pourraient se révéler fructueuses. Seuls les groupes ethniques européens qui comprenaient 90,000 âmes ou plus en 1951 sont mentionnés séparément dans l'énumération générale. Les autres figurent sous des titres appropriés, dans la section intitulée "Autres européens". Les sections de groupes ethniques majeurs qui ont formé des établissements ethniques et qui, à en juger par le degré d'intérêt qu'elles ont suscité chez les spécialistes de la recherche, ont une importance capitale en ce qui concerne la compréhension des relations ethniques, figurent comme sous-sections des groupes ethniques principaux, comme par exemple: Russe, Doukhobor.

La documentation relative aux sections ethniques particulières est classée, en outre, d'après le sujet principal et selon le même système de codification que celui utilisé dans la table des matières pour la section générale. Par conséquent, les études ayant trait aux groupes ethniques particuliers sont énumérées, par sujet, dans le même ordre que celui de la section générale. De cette façon, les personnes intéressées à un sujet particulier peuvent facilement trouver les travaux généraux afférents, ainsi que les études ethniques particulières qui s'y rattachent, dans les diverses sections.

Un index des auteurs est donné à l'annexe "A", tandis que l'annexe "B" contient la clé des abréviations utilisées.

Le texte est arrangé de façon à servir comme document bilingue. Les sections du texte qui sont appelées à être lues par tout le monde, telles que préface, table des matières, en-têtes de sections, et questionnaire, sont fournies dans les deux langues. Partout où cela est nécessaire, la version française suit le texte anglais, et elle porte le même numéro de page que le texte anglais, suivi de la lettre (F). Dans le corps de la publication, les références qui ont été publiées primitivement en anglais sont décrites dans cette langue, celles qui ont été publiées en français sont décrites en français. On estime que les personnes qui voudraient se référer aux articles en question dans la langue originale connaissent évidemment cette langue. Les sources de renseignements bilingues sont désignées par un seul astérisque (*). Les références aux publications en anglais et en français sont marquées d'un double astérisque ().

Nous voulons remercier ici tous ceux qui ont collaboré au présent ouvrage en nous fournissant des renseignements. Nous espérons que cette bibliographie sera utile aux personnes qui s'intéressent aux recherches sur la citoyenneté, l'immigration et les groupes ethniques du Canada. En retour, nous osons espérer que les bénéficiaires de ce service nous offriront leur concours en nous fournissant la liste des travaux ou projets récents dont ils sont au courant; ils pourront utiliser, à cette fin, la formule ou la feuille qu'ils trouveront à la fin de l'annexe "C", de façon que le relevé pour 1962-1963 puisse paraître dès le début de 1963.

Les questionnaires dûment remplis devront être adressés à la Division des recherches économiques et sociales, Ministère de la Citoyenneté et de l'Immigration, à Ottawa.

Le directeur des recherches,

Z. W. Sametz.

The thesis is a study of 33 main ethnic groups in the city of Vancouver. It attempts to discover to what extent the various groups are segregated into distinct neighbourhoods or communities, the reasons for this, and the possibility of such concentrations increasing or declining. It tries to assess the extent to which the groups have remained culturally distinct and the extent of assimilation, summarizing the major distinguishing features of each ethnic group with reference to the extent of their contribution to, and influence upon the city's appearance.

An examination of the cultural conditions under which high illegitimacy rates occur suggests possible modifications in theories of assimilation, the destruction of social and cultural systems, and the relations between social and cultural integration. Three deductions from the analysis suggest (1) a theory of phases, according to which rural rates in the New World should generally be higher than the urban; (2) a correlation between low national rates and the degree of national cultural and social integration; and (3) the existence of genuine communities in which there is internal cultural and social integration, and thus low illegitimacy rates. Data are presented to verify these deductions from the broader theory.

Vol. XXVI, No. 6, December 1961, p. 902-910.

In endeavoring to understand the wide variations between societies in the nature and process of race and ethnic relations, it is necessary to consider the conditions inherent, in contact between such populations. Assuming that race and ethnic groups differ in their social, political and economic institutions, then contact involves the presence of different and to some extent, incompatible social organizations. Further, groups will presumably differ in the capacity to impose their social order upon other nationalities. On these assumptions, the major hypothesis proposed is that the race relations cycle in societies where a migrant population imposes its social order differs sharply from the cycle in societies where the indigenous population is superordinate.

The educational adjustment survey was planned to assess the educational and cultural interests of new Canadian immigrants by means of personal interviews in certain Toronto residential areas. The findings suggest that books help the social integration of literate new Canadian immigrants. Reading books in the mother tongue is widespread and probably contributes to maintaining psychological balance during the process of adjustment. Therefore, the public library, with its foreign literature section, serves a real public need.

This study is designed to analyse observed differences in the frequency of various diagnoses, such as those of the functional group as "anxiety state", in the various nationalities which attend the medical out-patient clinic of the Toronto General Hospital. The basic questionnaires employed enquire into (a) the social background of the patient, and (b) the symptoms which he presents. Analysis to date suggests that diagnostic differences observed are not due to the symptoms presented. The latter appear to be consistent for all the national groups studied, and independent of language problems. A report of this investigation is forthcoming shortly.

In isolated northern Indian and Eskimo communities, the traditional status pattern has been profoundly altered by the presence of white men in superior positions. The rôle of the trader, the missionary, the official, the teacher, and the policeman is analysed. These fonctionnaires do not always work harmoniously together, a factor tending to increase the difficulty of the natives in meeting the problems of adjustment.

This is a very valuable series of essays on the Iroquois of today, as seen by a skilled journalist. He writes of their lives and problems, of the land and jurisdictional claims both in Canada and the United States, and of their ceremonies, all skillfully woven into a framework of history, and illustrated with anecdotes and personal experiences as well as relevant Iroquois myths.

psychosocial stresses (isolation, separation of families, change in mores and values, lack of language communication, loss of occupational status, economic stress, and rejection by Italians already established in the country) on the immigrant. Such stresses are agents in the dynamics of immigrant adjustment but it is difficult to say which are the more problematic because of the inter-reaction of the stresses upon one another. The most evident fact which emerges from the research is the lack of communication between the staff of the hospital and the patient.

SACO, Justo, o.f.m.

- 2-60 "Histoire de l'immigration espagnole à Québec". M.A. Thesis, Sociology, Laval University, 1960, 150 p.
Dans une première partie, l'auteur rappelle les grands traits de l'histoire de l'émigration espagnole vers les Amériques et s'attache plus particulièrement à l'analyse du courant d'émigration vers le Canada. Dans une seconde partie - la plus importante de la thèse -- il étudie la colonie espagnole de la ville de Québec: à partir de données recueillies au cours d'interviews, il cherche à préciser le degré d'adaptation de ce groupe d'immigrants (arrivés au pays depuis plus ou moins longtemps). Il observe que les Espagnols de Québec forment un groupe très fermé, qui résiste à l'assimilation.
